This splendid collection of primary texts, encyclopedias, articles and original essays was awarded to Eastern Michigan University Library as part of a Bridging Cultures Bookshelf: Muslim Journeys grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) and the American Library Association (ALA). This database has something for every knowledge level and almost every subject.

For beginners, there is the book What Everyone Needs to Know about Islam by John Esposito. Feature articles introduce topics such as “Islam in South Asia” and the “Arab Spring”. Primary sources address mathematics, music and any number of topics.

Excellent lesson plans and thematic guides are available in the “Learning Resources” section for topics as diverse as the partition of India and Pakistan, Sunni and Shi’a, and women in the Qur’an.

There is a helpful timeline to contextualize events. For experts, the concordance and Qur’anic sources are truly remarkable.

You should take advantage of this rich source while it is available: EMU Library’s access only extends to the end of 2013.

For more information:

http://guides.emich.edu/muslimjourneys

-Lisa Klopfer, Information Services Librarian